Southwestern Babies Measure Better Than Average Babies

SOUTHWESTERN standards of measurement, for babies, will be used by the El Paso Equal Franchise league in its "Better Babies" contest this spring. To be held the first week of May, instead of the eastern standards of measurement. It was found at the contest, held here a few years ago, under the auspices of the league, that when the eastern measurement standards were used our southwestern babies averaged broader chests, larger expansion, bigger heads and longer arms than the eastern babies of the same age, and so had to be graded down, because they did not conform to the measurement standards.

Southwestern standards have been compiled by the University of Texas and these will be used. Mrs. R. F. Jenkins announced this at the meeting of the Equal Franchise league Thursday afternoon, held in the chamber of commerce building. Mrs. Jenkins told of the way thus the women of San Antonio are conducting their "Better Babies" week, assisted by the hearty cooperation of the health department and the medical department of the city and county.

Mrs. L. T. Kibler and Mrs. Volney Leonard, president and secretary of the campaign of the Equal Franchise league, to put a woman, Mrs. J. A. Rawlings, on the school board. Mrs. Lawrence H. Clements is to be in charge of the project with a force of women under her for each precinct.

In line with the work of the National Woman's Suffrage association in doing in offering the services of the women of the organization to the nation, in case of trouble with Germany, it was voted that an efficiency committee be appointed by the president, Mrs. O. A. Critchett, to find out the kinds of work for which the members were fitted and to determine upon some course of helpfulness that the league members might pursue in the event of war.

Mrs. O. A. Critchett presided over the meeting. The usual routine reports were given to the officers.

Mrs. S. J. Pennell led the study of the study book on Texas Civics.

Mrs. A. Louise Dietrich read a paper, written by Mrs. R. H. Thompson, on local disregard of laws. The importance of enforcing the laws against expectorating on the sidewalks and in the street cars, against allowing weeds to grow on empty lots, and other regulations, necessary for the welfare of the community, were discussed in the paper.

Mrs. A. DePew read an article on the change of sentiment in regard to women's equal suffrage for women, through the efficient work of the women during the European war. Mrs. E. H. Carrington read an article on the proposed work of the National Woman's Suffrage association for the nation, in the event of war.

Mrs. Charles Bartlett was admitted.

PERA programs are a feature of the music world and are doing a great deal toward interesting the students in a better class of music. Once a month the opera programs are given with the entire score presented by the phonograph to the students. The story of the opera and some of the principal choruses are studied through the month preceding the opera program day. Miss Bees Hall, the music teacher of the high school, is supervising this work.

All the men are taking off their hats to Mrs. Julius Kravitz for her ability as a speaker. Mrs. Kravitz has been addressing a few of the most prominent men of the city, asking their support of Mrs. J. A. Rawlings, the candidate for the school board of the women's organization. Mrs. Kravitz's talks have been given extemporaneously and without notes, but they have been very convincing to the point, and well delivered. That clever, pretty woman has magnetism and lots of it and everything she does is attractive, especially the way she smiles. I really do not see how anyone could ever refuse to vote as she requested, if she smiled at them when she made her request.

Folks who don't sleep out of doors these days are missing half the joys of life. The nights are perfectly wonderful, with the cool night wind and the glorious star set sky. And then there is the moon, and you are in the morning, with patches of orange fire touching up the hill tops, how much nicer it is to be out in the open air. You would have to use it if you slept in doors.

A real happy head—unpolluted child! That is what Dorothy Waldron is, and a mighty talented youngster, too. She took the Woman's club by storm the other day with her violin solos. The girl, who is only 14 years old, has studied but two years, yet she plays with a spontaneous joy to what she is doing. The regular member, Dorothy and her mother, have only lived in El Paso about a year, coming here from New York city. While I love all our El Paso youngsters, yet some of them are rather prone to be fully grown up, blundering women by the time they reach 18, so to find a real happy child of that age was quite a delight. That is one nice thing about a newspaper job—you live in the home of a smiling, unexpected and every once in a while fate gives it to you.

In one of the infancy organizations that was one time camped in the city was a soldier named Winslow. The soldier was taken sick, and in writing to the regimental medic, his company commander wrote: "Winslow is sick. Please find his name." "Oh, it is a frame up," answered the medic.

Says Leaders Retain Office Because Merits Are Conceded

Member of Woman's Club Deplores Publicity That Has Attended Recent Election and Suggests That Methods of "Insurgents" Might Be Changed to Advantage.

Editor El Paso Herald:

It is apparent to readers that your paper is taking an interest in the present disagreement between the insurgents and the loyal members of the Woman's club.

Of course the men of the city are interested in the Woman's club. They have given most generously to it but I do not recall having been told or of knowing at first hand that any man gave toward our building fund with any proviso that he should have a hand in the club's affairs.

It was not necessary that this trifling internal difficulty which has, in very poor taste, been thrust upon the Woman's club, should have been thrust upon the public also. Since it has, there are one or two points which need adjustment.

On the face of it the report published in Wednesday's issue of the Herald but proves the efficiency and the judgment of the Woman's club. In all women's organizations there are always a handful of women who bear the brunt of the work. It is difficult, aside from these few faithful workers, to even get up a good sized committee. Upon the broad shoulders of the competent and the executive fall the burdens of an organization. Leaders are chosen by the members of the club, and they choose to elect the leaders to leadership, year after year, it is undoubtedly the opinion of the club that these women have been and are efficient in paying off old debts, incurring and paying new ones, and in running the club's affairs.

There are always, in every organization, those who would be leaders, who desire the glory and do not shirk the work, who technically are fitted for executive office, but who are not big enough to get away from the petty and the personal and the selfish for a sufficient length of time to make themselves of permanent value to an organization.

I am aware that the insurgents will ask me what freedom they have in election when the members of the club are usually formed, partly automatically, of the very members to whom they are antagonistic. My reply is that nominations are always in order from the floor and there is nothing in the rules governing the club to prevent the name of any woman being put up for election. To this they will give objection that that is a very awkward thing to do and that the member so nominated would be withdrawn her name. They don't sometimes. Again I reply. It would have been far less awkward and more dignified if these nominations had been made from the floor at the cost of a little personal feeling, if need be, than to have dragged the heretofore splendidly clean skirts of the club in the mire of public contention and quibble.

I am told, however, that the insurgents are not dissatisfied with the outcome of the election. The names of those members whom they especially wanted elected were on the ticket but were defeated.

I am also told that the insurgents were aware during the election that the method was illegal but they made no effort to prevent an illegal election. After the votes were counted, they asked for a new election. The names of those members whom they especially wanted elected were on the ticket but were defeated.
